And if this Rule shall be suspended or modified as aforesaid the promoters of any Private Bill which is presented after the time hereinbefore limited, or for which the Petition has been received after the time hereinbefore limited, shall in either case pay double the fees required as herein mentioned, unless the House shall order to the contrary. DOMINION ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

[Ref. 509,383.]

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA.

Wednesday, the 14th day of March, 1906.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL
IN COUNCIL.

ON a Report dated 1st March, 1906, from the Minister of the Interior stating that by an Order in Council, dated 31st May, 1902, certain lands surrounding Coquitlam Lake, in the Province of British Columbia, were sold to the City of New Westminster at a nominal price for the purpose of protecting from contamination the waters of that Lake from which the City obtains its domestic supply. The sale of the land, however, did not convey the timber within the area sold, and in order to co-operate with the City this timber was reserved from sale by Order in Council dated the 17th of August, 1904.

The Minister further states that application having been made to the Department of the Interior for permission to cut the timber on this land under the provisions of the regulations in that behalf, and advice having been received from the Mayor of New Westminster to the effect that a satisfactory arrangement could be made between the Corporation and the persons securing the right to cut the timber on the above land, the Order in Council of the 17th of August, 1904, was rescinded by an Order dated the 8th November, 1905, in so far as it applied to the available portion of the tract in connection with which application had been made to cut timber.

That the City of New Westminster, however, in January, 1906, advised the Minister of the Interior that they had withdrawn their consent to the withdrawal from sale of the timber from the lands surrounding Coquitlam Lake, as the ratepayers of the City were of the opinion that the removal of the timber and the operations necessary in connection therewith would have the effect of contaminating and depleting the City's water supply, and that they ask that the timber on this land be again withdrawn from sale.

The Minister recommends that the Order in Council dated 8th November, 1905, be rescinded and that the timber on the lands surrounding Coquitlam Lake which have been sold to the City of New Westminster, be again reserved from sale as provided in the Order in Council of the 17th August, 1904.

The Committee submit the same for approval.

JOHN J. MCGEE,

Clerk of the Privy Council.

JUDGMENT.

Reasons for Judgment given by the Honourable the Chief Justice upon a reference to him under sec. 11 of the "Supreme Court Act," of the question whether the "Midway and Vernon Railway Aid Act, 1902," was in full force and effect on the 7th December, 1905, or had it prior to that date become null and void.

HAVING regard to the fact that it is very important to all the parties directly concerned in this undertaking, and to the Government, as well as to the residents of the Okanagan Valley, through which this road is being constructed, that the matter of this question should be set at rest at once; and also having regard to the fact that the Appeal Court will be sitting shortly, and that my opinion will be subject to review by that Court, and that no doubt, having regard to the circumstances of the case, that Court would permit a speedy appeal, I think it proper to give judgment now.

In the year 1901 the Midway and Vernon Railway Company were duly incorporated by an Act of the Legislature of British Columbia; this Act was passed on May 11th of that year. The Act provides, among other things, that the clauses and sections of the "British Columbia Railway Act" should apply to the Company in the same manner, and to the same extent, as if the same had been set forth clause by clause in this Act. By section 20 it is provided that a deposit of $10,000 should be made before the 1st of October, 1902, to secure construction of the railway. It is admitted that that deposit was not made, and therefore the later clauses of that section came into force, which declare that the Act is null and void, and the Act did become null and void by reason of that proviso on the 19th of May, 1902. There is a section also, 22, by which it is provided that the construction of the railway was to begin at Vernon, and be carried on from Vernon to Midway. That portion of this section was repealed by an Act passed in the year 1904. One argument which Mr. Bodwell put forward was that the fact that the Legislature made this amendment in 1904 must be regarded as a recognition by the Legislature that the Aid Act which was therein referred to was still in force. In view of the conclusion I have come to on the other questions I do not think it is necessary to enter into that. The Act came in force by the provisions of section 24 on the 19th of November of the same year.

In the next year the "Subsidy Act," called the "Midway and Vernon Railway Aid Act, 1902," was passed, and by section 3, notwithstanding the lapse which had taken place with regard to the former Act, that Act was in all respects "revived and confirmed as if it had been hereby specially re-enacted."

The Aid Act goes on to provide that the Company shall commence work on the railway within six months after a subsidy, satisfactory to the Company, shall have been granted by the Parliament and Government of Canada in aid of the construction of the railway, and shall duly and diligently prosecute the same until completed to the satisfaction of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. It goes on to provide that the Government may pay, at their option, $5,000 in cash or debentures or inscribed stock of the Province for every mile of railway, not exceeding 152 miles.

There is another provision to the effect that the railway shall be commenced and completed within six months after the Parliament of Canada have granted aid satisfactory to the Company, and that the railway should be completed within three years thereafter.

And then we come to sub-section (m) of section 3, by which it is provided that "notwithstanding anything contained in the Act, if the said Company have not begun the construction of the said railway on or before the first day of January, 1904, this Act shall be null and void."

Now, the sole question submitted by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, for the opinion of the Court, is whether or not this Act was in force on December the 7th, 1905; in other words, whether the construction of the railway was commenced on or before the 1st of January, 1904.

In 1903 the Dominion Act, Chapter 57 of that year, was passed, by which the Government of Canada was empowered to grant subsidies to a number of different railway lines throughout the country, of which the Midway and Vernon Railway is one. By Chapter 152 of that year the undertaking was declared to be for the general advantage of Canada.

On December 26th of that year, according to the evidence, Mr. Wood and Mr. Ashcroft proceeded to Vernon. Mr. Ashcroft, on the instructions of the Syndicate, located some five miles of the line south of Vernon, in which work he was engaged for some two months. Part of that route, some thousand feet or more, was located by him at Rock Point, a place on Long Lake, about three miles south of Vernon. He completed some five miles of survey, and two men were employed upon the actual grading of the proposed route.

No plans or profiles were filed of this survey of the five miles before the 1st of January, 1904, in fact they were not filed until March the 3rd of the year, and they were filed with the Department of Lands and Works.

Now, we have the positive testimony of Mr. Ashcroft, and the testimony of one of the men who were doing the work upon this railway, that the actual work of grading was commenced on the 28th of December, 1903.

The witness Seydel produced a memorandum book, which, on inspection by the Court, was to all appearances a book of original entry, made at the time, in which a charge is made against the Syndicate promoting this undertaking for work done upon the last three days of December, and the different days during the successive 15 months. It is sworn by that witness, and not contradicted, and not in any way impeached in cross-examination, that the sum of $2,754.64 was paid by the Syndicate to these men for that work.

It is also stated that Mr. Ellison, a member of the Legislature and resident of that district, formally inaugurated the commencement of the construction of this railway on January 1st. It is sworn, and not contradicted, that the work of grading was prosecuted by these two particular men for the space of 15 months.

On the 3rd of March, as I have said, the plans were filed in the Department of Lands and Works.

Upon the 16th of May, 1904, there was a contract entered into with the Atlantic Contracting Company, but nothing came of that. And it has been suggested that it was through the influence of a rival railway that the contracting company were induced not to carry out their engagement with the Syndicate. As to that I am not called upon to enter, as I do not propose to speculate. That contract was finally abandoned by the Atlantic Contracting Company in December of that year.

In February, 1905, there was an interview with the Premier by Mr. Smailes. Of course, exactly what took place at that interview I am unable to say, because I have only heard the evidence of one party to it. There was also an interview by the Company's Solicitor on March 15th, when it appears that the Solicitor went to the Premier to get an assurance of some kind or other from the Government that the Government considered that the Subsidy Act was still alive. It would appear, so far as I can make out from the evidence, that at that early date the Government did have some doubts as to whether the Subsidy Act was alive. At any rate, however that may be, on the 9th of October, in an interview with Mr. Arthur, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Macdowall, the Government intimated that they thought a reference to the Court ought to be had in order to settle the question. And that was followed up by a peremptory statement, it appears, in Montreal, in which a member of the Government took the position that until the matter was properly decided by a competent Court they would not consider themselves obligated to pay any moneys under the Subsidy Act.

It appears further, too, that some time in July Mr. Cain, Mr. Arthur and Mr. Macdowall also had an interview with Mr. McBride, the Premier, to see if the Government would not enter into a contract—a sort of subsidy contract similar to that which they had obtained from the Dominion Government on July 28th of the same year; but the Government had taken apparently the same stand, and refused to enter into any such subsidy contract. The reason, of course, why the promoters desired to have a subsidy contract was to set the matter at rest, and according to their statements they preferred to have the cash which was authorised by the Statute, rather than the stock or debentures. However that may be, the Government apparently took the view at as early a time as February, 1905, that there was some doubt as to the obligation of the Government to give the aid that was empowered by the Subsidy Act, and they, quite justifiably in my opinion, thought it proper to refer the matter to the Court.

Now, it is undoubted, according to the evidence, that some $5,000 was expended for exploratory surveys, and some $3,500 in actual construction, and a sum of money was spent by the Atlantic Contract Company of upwards of $10,000 in furtherance of the undertaking. In July, after the plans were filed with the Dominion Government, and the Order in Council was secured authorising the payment of $3,200 a mile, a contract was entered into with the Okanagan Construction Company, and under that contract somewhere about $90,000 has been expended in the construction of this railway. And it is also shown, and it has not been suggested that it is not so, that some ten miles of this railway have actually been graded from Midway, and that the whole line has been located, and that plans covering the whole 152 miles have been deposited with the Minister of Railways.

I am also informed that the actual construction of this railway will cost somewhere in the neighbourhood of two millions and three-quarters, and when equipped properly will cost somewhere in the neighbourhood of four millions.

Now, of course, the sole question, as I have said, that I have to consider, is whether or not, following out the terms of sub-section (m) of section 3 of the Railway Aid Act, the construction of this railway did actually commence before the 1st of January, 1904. Now, as I have just said, the evidence is indisputable that two men were put to work upon actual grading, and that they did work continuously for a period of 15 months. It is true that they only graded some quarter of a mile, but that work cannot, so far as I can see, be referred to any other intention than an intention to commence and complete the construction of this railway. As I have said, some $2,700 was paid to those men for that very work, and therefore, as a matter of fact, it seems to me I must hold that the construction of the railway did actually commence in point of fact on or before the 1st of January, 1904.

Now, it has been suggested by the learned counsel for the Government, that the Legislature intended that there should be a substantial amount of work done, to show beyond any question that there was a bona fide intention to commence and complete this railway, and that a comparatively microscopic amount of work, such as this admittedly is, and which if prosecuted at the same rate would require between some six and seven hundred years to complete this railway, was not the kind of construction which was contemplated by the Legislature. All I can say about that is this, that it is a well known principle in connection with the construction of Statutes, that if the Legislature has required the doing of a certain act as a condition for the acquirement of a right or privilege, and the act has in fact been done, it is not the duty of the Court to hold that it has not been done simply because it might have been done in a better or more satisfactory way. There is no doubt, of course, that a great deal more money could have been expended on the commencement of this project. Of course a large number of workmen might have been put on on or before the first of January, and a great deal of construction actually done before that stage arrived. But this is not what the Legislature required. All that the Legislature required was that the actual construction of the railway should commence on or before that date. It would have been a comparatively simple matter for the Legislature, if it had seen fit, to require that construction to the value of $10,000, or whatever sum it chose, should be completed before a particular date, in order to secure that a substantial construction should commence. But that is not what the Legislature, in its wisdom, has seen fit to do. It has simply required that the construction should commence on or before that date. And I take it in the case of the largest undertakings, such as the Pacific Railway itself, the undertaking must have originated in the comparatively small and, in one sense, insignificant, act of turning the first sod.

Now, there has been something said about charter-mongering by people that had no money. And it was also suggested that it was quite evident from the financial capacity of these people that there was no serious intention of going on; that they could not possibly have gone on, in view of the amount that this road required for its construction. But we must remember in this country where railroad construction costs huge sums of money, that, generally speaking, the only practical way in which railways can be built, and in which they ordinarily are built, is that residents of the particular locality that desire it to be built bring the advantages of the proposed railway to centres of capital, such as London and New York, where the money is to be had. If this country were to wait for the building of railways until the people who are in the country could build it out of their own resources, then I fancy a great many of us would not live to see any new railways built at all. It is quite common, in the ordinary course, for local residents of the district where it is thought that a railway would be a benefit, to bring the project before the Legislature and get themselves incorporated as a company, and then endeavour to interest financiers in England, New York or elsewhere, who, of course, would not have known anything about it had not the local people brought it to their attention. And I think that the Legislature is perfectly well aware of the fact that the vast majority of persons who come seeking for charters and for aid are local people who have local knowledge, but who have not means sufficient to actually construct the railway, and the Legislature knows perfectly well that the money has to be secured from abroad.

Now, there is another point, though, about which I have had a little more doubt, and that is the contention which has been raised by the learned counsel for the Government, that what is meant by the term "construction," in the forfeiture clause, is construction in accordance with the B. C. Railway Act or with the Dominion Railway Act. And while his preference seemed to be for the proposition that the Dominion Railway Act was incorporated into the Act, still it did not seem to make any difference to him for the purposes of his argument, because the fact undoubtedly was that before the 1st of January, 1904, there were no plans filed either with the British Columbia authorities or with the Dominion authorities, and his contention was that before the construction contemplated by the section could be said to have commenced, that it necessarily involved the depositing of plans either with the British Columbia authorities or with the Dominion authorities, and that no plans having been filed with either of those authorities, there was no construction within the meaning of the Act. Now, upon the best consideration that I can give to the matter, I do not think that is so. I think what the Legislature meant was simply that construction should in fact commence on or before the first of January, and that it did not intend that it should be construction of such a character as would not invite lawsuits from any possible source. It might easily be, even though plans had been filed with one or other of these authorities, that persons through whose land it was proposed to build this railway might have been in position to come into Court and get an injunction against the inception or prosecution of the work. But I do not think that that is what the Legislature was contemplating. I think that simply intended that there should be bona fide commencement of construction of the railway in fact. And if anyone chose to complain, either the authorities or the people through whose lands the railway was proposed to be built, if any of these people did choose to complain, and secured an injunction, of course that would have been a misfortune to the people who were claiming the subsidy. But the construction having actually begun, and, as I find, bona fide begun, I do not think it was the intention of the Legislature to require that the construction should be of such a character that it should be said that all the preliminaries required by either of these Acts were carried out.

Reference was made to the case of Stratford v. Perth, in Ontario. In that case the learned Judges in the Court of Appeal were divided in opinion, upon a case somewhat of the same kind, as to whether the plans which were called for by the Act should have been filed before it could be said that construction was commenced. I must say that the opinion of Mr. Justice Moss appeals to me more than the opinions of some of the other learned Judges, and I desire to adopt a portion of his judgment. I gather from his judgment that his view is that the cardinal object in requiring these plans to be filed is to notify the public, and all who might be concerned, where it is intended to build the railway, and to give an opportunity to those people whose land it is proposed to condemn, to object if they see fit to object. He says, at page 170 of the report, in 38 U. C. R.: "I am not satisfied, having regard to the whole scope and object of these provisions, that the true construction may not be simply that their extraordinary powers shall not be used until the deposit has been made. I can perceive difficulties in the way of this construction, and it is easy to see numerous and grave inconveniences, without counterbalancing advantages, in a construction which absolutely prohibits any works upon the railway until a full plan and book have been deposited. But granting that, upon the strict letter of the Statute, the company could not lawfully proceed with the execution of their railway (whatever they may exactly mean), I am of opinion that the object does not destroy the company's demand. They had in fact performed work of construction on lands, for the purchase of which they had contracted." Here, of course, they had the permission of the authorised agent of the owner, and, so far as I can see in that view of the matter, they were proceeding perfectly legally. He also says: "The contracts actually made were for the acquisition of the land of the vendors required for the railway, and were within the Statute. The owners could not object," etc. "I do not rest my opinion that this objection should be disregarded upon this ground alone. I think that corporation should be required to show some damage or prejudice before it is made effectual to defeat this by-law and destroy this enterprise. It is to be borne in mind that a strict compliance with the by-law did not require a commencement within the year," etc.

Then again, I put it, in argument, to Mr. Maclean this way, and he was unable to give a satisfactory answer. The Legislature must have contemplated the probability of Parliament taking over control of the railway in the event of a Parliamentary subsidy being given. Suppose that the promoters had completed their plans, and were about to comply with all the preliminaries of the B. C. Railway Act before commencing construction, when only a few days before the time set for commencing the construction Parliament had brought the railway under the provisions of the Dominion Railway Act, at a time when it would be impossible to comply before the day set, with all the preliminaries required by the Act. Can it be supposed that the Legislature intended anything so unlikely as that the promoters would thereby be disabled from earning the subsidy, the object of the Act being to encourage the building of the railway? I think not.

That then, in short, is the view I have come to about the meaning of that word "construction," whether it is to be considered in the light of the B. C. provisions or in the light of the Dominion provisions. It simply means that there should be bona fide commencement and construction as a matter of fact, and that it did not require such a construction as could not be made a subject of a lawsuit by anybody, or by any Governmental authority. I do not think the Government were called upon to complain so far as the granting of the subsidy is concerned, of the non-filing of the plans. If they had regarded it in the public interest that the railway should not be allowed to proceed farther before the filing of the plans, they would of course have taken the appropriate proceedings.

As to the suggestion made by Mr. Bodwell, that the forfeiture clause itself is not self-executing, I do not think I need enter into that, in view of the conclusion I have come to on the other contentions.

My view then is, that upon the 7th of December, 1905, this Subsidy Aid Act was in force, and I shall so certify to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor.
